“Pandemic, Politics, and Creation: How Genesis Anchors Our Apologetics in the Midst of Chaos”

The Creation Society finds itself in a unique position to hold forth the stability and sanity of the Scriptures against the world's self-destructing madness. An unending pandemic, political upheaval, imposed isolation, a new normal, 'cancel culture,' and wreckage of peaceful protests are exposing the corroded foundation of "reason" which used to rule the secular world.

In the past the church argued apologetically from the facts to sound conclusions to both justify its own existence and commend its creed as worthy of acceptance. The rules are changing. The evolutionary culture of death is repositioning itself to subdue its Christian enemies with political rather than rational weapons. It will compel if it cannot persuade.

Nevertheless, Genesis 1-3 continues to order our lives according to God's good and gracious will. No matter how the world changes the rules of reason and apologetics, the foundations of church, family, and lawful society remain the same. The Word of God continues to provide the ground from which we argue and, against the self-destructive culture of death, shines a ray of saving hope on the hopeless world.

Pastor Flamme is the senior pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church in Roswell, NM.
