Mr. Tommy Lohman

"Beholding Behemoth: The Theology and Paleontology Behind the Chief of Dinosaurs"

Tommy will explain why Behemoth is considered a dinosaur by showing this animal's unique anatomical and biomechanical description in Job 40. Then, he will discuss relevant perspectives as a paleontologist and demonstrate the correct relationship between science and theology. His goal is to change how you see dinosaurs and ultimately lead you to marvel at the grandeur and majesty of God, the Creator of the universe.

About Mr. Lohman: Tommy Lohman is the vice president of the creation apologetics ministry Foundation Advancing Creation Truth; he also serves as the field paleontologist for the Glendive Dinosaur and Fossil Museum in Glendive, Montana. He holds a BS in religion from Liberty University. Tommy's work in paleontology during the summer focuses on field excavation and fossil prep work. He is currently working in the lab on preparing the fossilized bones of a triceratops. Also, his studies in paleontology are presently focusing on the biomechanics and physiology of dinosaurs with an emphasis on Hell Creek dinosaurs and sauropods.
